

name: _____

class: _____

date: _____

20th Century American Literature

20th Century American Literature experienced a _____ like never before. This era witnessed the emergence of different _____ and themes, reflecting the changing _____. Authors like F. Scott Fitzgerald captured the _____ age's spirit, while Ernest Hemingway's _____ prose depicted the post-war disillusionment. The Harlem Renaissance marked a significant _____, highlighting African American voices like Langston Hughes. This period also saw the rise of _____ writers like Sylvia Plath, who challenged traditional gender roles. Meanwhile, the _____ Depression influenced writers such as John Steinbeck, who portrayed the struggles of the _____ man. As the century progressed, postmodernism became prominent, with authors like Thomas Pynchon experimenting with _____ techniques. The _____ of the mid-20th century, including the Cold War, were reflected in works of writers like Joseph Heller. Additionally, the _____ rights movement inspired literature that explored racial and social justice themes. Towards the end of the century, the emergence of _____ and globalization influenced the literary _____. Writers like Toni Morrison delved into the complexities of identity and _____. As the 20th century closed, American literature had become a diverse and dynamic _____, enriched by various voices and _____. This evolution not only mirrored the changing American _____ but also left an indelible mark on the global literary _____.

perspectives

Great

technology

jazz

concise

transformation

society

common

conflicts

scene

narrative

feminist

tapestry

civil

landscape

history

experience

movement

styles