

name: _____

class: _____

date: _____

Architectural Wonders of Rome in Britain

The ancient Romans were master builders and their influence is still visible in _____ today. One of the most significant contributions was the introduction of _____, which revolutionized the way water was supplied to _____. The Romans also brought with them the concept of _____, providing a place for relaxation and socialization. These baths were not just about _____; they were centers of community life. Another remarkable Roman invention was the _____ network, which connected cities across the empire with precision and efficiency. The construction of _____ and walls for protection, such as the famous Hadrian's _____, demonstrated Roman military engineering skills. In cities, the Romans built imposing _____ dedicated to various gods, showing their religious devotion. The _____, a public square, served as a marketplace and a venue for public speeches and _____. Roman houses, especially the homes of the wealthy, included _____ and underfloor heating systems, showcasing their advanced living standards. The _____ were grand structures used for entertainment, such as gladiator fights, which drew large _____. Schools were established to educate the young in literature, philosophy, and the arts, highlighting the value Romans placed on _____. The legacy of Roman architecture in Britain is a testament to their engineering prowess and cultural _____, which has lasted through the ages.

- | | | | | | | | |
|-------------|-------|---------|--------------|---------|---------------|---------|-----------|
| aqueducts | forts | road | public baths | debates | amphitheaters | Wall | influence |
| cleanliness | forum | mosaics | cities | crowds | education | temples | Britain |