

name: _____

class: _____

date: _____

Bunker Hill Battle Overview

The Battle of Bunker Hill was a significant event in the American _____. It took place on June 17, 1775, in Charlestown, Massachusetts. The battle was one of the earliest major _____ between British troops and American colonists. Although the British won the battle, it demonstrated the _____ and resilience of the American forces.

The American troops were led by Colonel William _____. They fortified Breed's Hill, mistakenly believing it to be Bunker Hill. The British, commanded by _____ William Howe, launched several assaults on the American positions.

Despite their limited _____, the Americans managed to repel the first two attacks. On the third assault, the British finally broke through as the Americans ran out of _____.

The battle resulted in heavy casualties for both sides. The British suffered over 1,000 casualties, including many _____. The American casualties were around 450. This high number of British casualties shocked the British _____ and showed that the Americans could stand up to the British army.

The _____ of the Battle of Bunker Hill lies in its psychological impact. It boosted the morale of the American _____ and supporters of the revolution. It also demonstrated to the British that the conflict would not be easily won. The _____ "Don't fire until you see the whites of their eyes" is famously associated with this battle, highlighting the _____ and resolve of the American troops.

In conclusion, the Battle of Bunker Hill was a pivotal _____ in the early stages of the American Revolution. It showcased the Americans' willingness to fight for their _____ and signaled a long and challenging war ahead.

- | | | | | | | | |
|-----------|--------------|---------------|------------|----------|----------|------------|--------|
| forces | supplies | determination | ammunition | officers | Prescott | discipline | phrase |
| conflicts | independence | significance | Revolution | command | General | moment | |