

name: _____

class: _____

date: _____

County Londonderry and the Plantation of Ulster

The Plantation of Ulster was a significant event in Irish history. It involved the _____ of Ulster by English and Scottish settlers in the early 17th century. The English _____ implemented this to control the region and spread Protestantism. County _____ played a crucial role in this process. The city of _____, later renamed Londonderry, became a focal point for settlers. The _____ guilds were responsible for the development of this area, transforming it into a thriving _____. In County Londonderry, the native Irish were displaced from their lands. The new settlers built fortified _____ and established farms. The introduction of Protestant settlers led to significant cultural and religious _____. The conflict between the native Irish and the settlers often resulted in violence. County Londonderry's _____ grew due to the new agricultural practices introduced by the settlers.

Derry was granted a royal _____ in 1613, which officially changed its name to Londonderry. This move was symbolic of the Crown's influence over the _____. The walls built around Londonderry were a defense mechanism against potential _____. These walls still stand today as a reminder of the past. The _____ of the Plantation of Ulster, particularly in County Londonderry, is evident in the region's demographics and _____.

colonization towns area Crown charter settlement changes Londonderry legacy Derry culture rebellions economy London