

name: class: date:

Early American Civilizations

Early American civilizations, including the _____, Aztec, and Inca, were known for their impressive achievements in various fields. The Maya, located in Central America, were renowned for their complex _____ system and hieroglyphic writing. They built magnificent _____ and cities like Tikal and Chichen Itza. The Aztec civilization, centered in present-day Mexico, was famous for its vast _____ and advanced agricultural techniques. Their capital, Tenochtitlan, was a marvel of engineering with its floating _____. The Inca, dominating the Andes region in South America, created a vast _____ of roads spanning their empire. They were skilled in _____, evident in structures like Machu Picchu. These civilizations practiced various forms of _____, often involving elaborate rituals and ceremonies. The Maya, for instance, believed in a complex pantheon of _____. Unfortunately, these civilizations declined due to factors like European _____ and internal strife. The Spanish conquest significantly impacted these societies, leading to the loss of their _____ and languages. Today, their legacy continues to fascinate researchers and history enthusiasts, shedding light on the rich and diverse history of the Americas before European arrival.

religion

temples

gods

cultures

network

Maya

empire

calendar

conquest

gardens

architecture