

name: _____

class: _____

date: _____

France During the Hundred Years' War

During the Hundred Years' War, _____ and England fought over who would control the French throne. The _____ began in 1337 when the English king claimed he was the rightful _____ of France, challenging the French monarchy. In these times, the concept of _____ was beginning to take shape, making the war not just a battle for power but also for identity. The _____ Prince, Edward of England, was a key figure, known for his military successes against the _____. However, the tide of the war changed with the appearance of _____ of Arc. Claiming to have visions from God, she inspired the French _____ to achieve significant victories. One of the most famous battles she led was the siege of _____, which turned the war's momentum in favor of France. Despite her capture and execution by the English, Joan of Arc became a _____ of French unity and resistance. The war saw many battles, including the notable Battle of _____, where the English longbowmen decimated the French knights. Over time, the conflict exhausted both _____, leading to shifts in military tactics and the rise of professional _____. The Hundred Years' War finally ended in 1453, with France regaining control of its _____, marking the end of medieval warfare as it was known and the beginning of a new era in European _____.

Orléans French king nations Agincourt France Black history army Joan armies conflict symbol nationalism territory