

name: _____

class: _____

date: _____

Horticultural Impact on Garden Design

In the 18th century, the English garden underwent a significant transformation. The _____ gardens of the past, characterized by their symmetrical patterns and manicured _____, began to change. Influential horticultural _____ emerged, playing a pivotal role in this evolution. These organizations were _____ to the study and promotion of gardening knowledge. They introduced exotic plants from _____, enriching the diversity of English gardens. This period saw the rise of the _____ garden, designed to mimic natural scenery. Notable figures such as _____ Brown and Humphry Repton were at the forefront, crafting sprawling parks that looked effortlessly _____. Their designs often featured artificial lakes, rolling _____, and scattered groves. These gardens were not just for beauty; they also served as places of _____ and contemplation. Membership in these societies became a mark of _____ among the wealthy. Through their publications and _____, they influenced garden design trends across Europe. The legacy of these societies continues today, with many historic gardens preserved for _____ enjoyment. Their efforts have ensured that the art of garden design remains a _____ part of cultural heritage.

- societies
- wild
- status
- leisure
- dedicated
- hedges
- hills
- vibrant
- public
- exhibitions
- landscape
- Capability
- formal
- abroad