

name: _____

class: _____

date: _____

Leonardo's Legacy

Leonardo da Vinci was a _____ of the Renaissance, a period known for its emphasis on art, science, and _____. Born in _____, Leonardo was not just an artist, but also an inventor, scientist, and thinker. His curiosity led him to explore various fields, making him a true _____. One of his most famous paintings, the _____, is renowned for its enigmatic smile and intricate detail. Leonardo's interest in the human body led him to conduct detailed _____ studies, which he documented in numerous sketches. These studies not only advanced art but also the understanding of human _____. In addition to painting and anatomy, Leonardo had a passion for _____. He designed machines that were ahead of his time, including concepts for a flying machine and a _____. Despite his many contributions, many of Leonardo's ideas remained on paper and were not realized during his _____. He believed in the interconnection of art and science, a philosophy that defined the Renaissance. Leonardo's legacy is not just in his artworks, but in his approach to knowledge and _____, inspiring generations to come.

physiology

genius

engineering

innovation

tank

1452

lifetime

humanism

polymath

Mona Lisa

anatomical