

name: _____

class: _____

date: _____

Medieval Lyric Poetry

In the _____, poetry was a popular form of entertainment and expression. Many _____ wrote about love, nature, and the human experience. One common type of poetry was the _____, which was often short and expressed personal feelings. These poems were sometimes set to _____, making them memorable and entertaining.

Lyric poetry in medieval _____ had a distinct style. The language used was _____, which sounds quite different from modern English. Famous poets like Chaucer and _____ contributed significantly to this era. They used various poetic _____, such as alliteration and rhyme, to enhance the beauty of their words.

These poems were not just for the _____. They were enjoyed by people from all _____. This was partly because _____ and troubadours traveled from town to town, sharing these poems. Their performances made the poems accessible to everyone, regardless of their ability to _____ or write.

The themes of medieval lyric poetry were _____. Love was a common theme, often portrayed as an _____ and unattainable goal. Nature was another popular topic, used to reflect the poet's _____ or the human condition. Some poems were _____, reflecting the deep spirituality of the time.

This era's poetry was also notable for its use of _____. Poets used vivid descriptions to bring their ideas to life. This made the poems not just a source of _____, but also a means of teaching and reflecting on life's _____.

Langland idealized classes poets music England Middle Ages lessons lyric imagery entertainment emotions diverse elite Middle English religious devices read minstrels