

name: _____

class: _____

date: _____

Paul Revere's Heroic Journey

Paul Revere was an important figure in the American _____. He is best known for his midnight ride in April 1775. Revere was a skilled _____ and a patriot. He was part of a group called the Sons of Liberty. The British _____ were planning to attack the colonial militia. Revere's job was to warn the _____ about the approaching soldiers. He rode through the night to alert _____ and leaders like John Hancock and Samuel Adams. Revere used a system of _____ to communicate. He arranged to have two lanterns placed in the Old North Church. This signal meant the _____ were coming by sea. Revere's warning allowed the militia to prepare for the battles of Lexington and _____. His brave actions helped start the American fight for _____.

Paul Revere didn't ride alone. He was accompanied by other riders like William Dawes and Samuel _____. Each rider had a specific route to ensure the warning reached as many _____ as possible. Revere and his fellow riders faced many dangers on their journey. They had to avoid British _____ and navigate through rough terrain. Despite these challenges, they succeeded in their mission. The _____ of the British approach spread quickly thanks to their efforts. Revere's midnight ride has been immortalized in _____ and legend. It remains a symbol of American courage and resilience. His ride showed the importance of communication and _____ in times of crisis. Today, Paul Revere is remembered as a national hero for his contributions to the American Revolution.

- poetry
- teamwork
- colonists
- troops
- Prescott
- news
- independence
- patrols
- townspeople
- British
- Concord
- signals
- Revolution
- people
- silversmith