

name: _____

class: _____

date: _____

Peasant Women in Medieval Times

Peasant women in medieval English society had diverse and significant roles. They were responsible for _____ chores, such as cooking, cleaning, and caring for children. Besides these tasks, they also worked in the _____ alongside men, planting and harvesting crops. Their day began early, often before _____, and ended after sunset. Life was not easy; peasant women faced many hardships, including long working hours and limited _____.

These women played a crucial role in _____ the family. They were skilled in making _____ for their family, using wool from sheep they raised. Moreover, they were knowledgeable in herbal _____, often serving as healers in their communities. Despite their contributions, peasant women had little recognition and their _____ were rarely heard in public affairs.

Marriage for peasant women was typically arranged, and they had little say in the matter. Once married, they worked tirelessly alongside their _____. Children were a common part of their lives, with many women having several _____. Unfortunately, due to the high infant mortality rate, not all children survived to _____.

Education for peasant women was rare. Most could not _____ or write, as their primary focus was on immediate survival and family care. Their lives were governed by the _____ and the demands of the land. Despite these challenges, they displayed remarkable _____ and strength, contributing significantly to the fabric of medieval English society.

adulthood

resilience

seasons

husbands

rights

sunrise

clothes

sustaining

medicine

read

household

fields

offspring

voices