

name: _____

class: _____

date: _____

Renaissance and Humanism

The _____ was a period of great change and innovation. It marked the transition from the _____ Ages to the modern world. One of the key movements of this era was _____, which focused on the importance of individuals and their contributions to society. Humanists believed in the _____ of the human mind and sought to revive the study of classical _____, philosophy, and arts. They emphasized the value of _____ and encouraged the pursuit of knowledge in various fields such as science, _____, and art. This movement had a profound impact on the way _____ viewed themselves and the world around them. Artists like Leonardo _____ and Michelangelo created works that celebrated human beauty and achievement. Writers such as _____ and Petrarch explored human emotions and experiences in their literature. In science, figures like _____ challenged traditional views and opened new ways of understanding the _____. The Renaissance was not just a time of artistic flourishing but also a period where the concept of _____ began to take root, influencing societies to value personal achievements and contributions. This era laid the _____ for many aspects of the modern world, from advancements in _____ to new forms of government and society.

politics potential Galileo technology Humanism education individuality Renaissance groundwork Dante literature universe Middle da Vinci people