

name: _____

class: _____

date: _____

Superstitions and Legends

In English-speaking countries, many people believe in _____. These are beliefs that certain actions or events can bring good or bad _____. For example, it's considered unlucky to walk under a _____. This belief may have originated from its shape resembling a _____, a symbol of the Holy Trinity. Another common superstition is that breaking a _____ brings seven years of bad luck. This idea possibly comes from the ancient belief that a mirror holds a piece of the _____. Black _____ are also associated with superstitions. In some cultures, they are believed to bring good luck, while in others, they are seen as bad omens. The _____ thirteen is often considered unlucky, especially when it falls on a Friday. This fear is so widespread that some buildings don't have a thirteenth _____. Finding a _____, on the other hand, is thought to bring good luck. This is because they are rare and difficult to _____. On _____, many superstitions come to life. People carve _____ and tell ghost stories, linking the holiday to the supernatural. Some believe that spirits and _____ roam freely on this night. In folklore, _____ are said to fly on brooms, and this image is popular during Halloween celebrations. Superstitions and folklore are an important part of the _____ in English-speaking countries, reflecting the rich history and beliefs of the people.

four-leaf clover

pumpkins

soul

number

ghosts

luck

floor

cats

find

Halloween

witches

superstitions

ladder

culture

mirror

triangle