

name: class: date:

The Art of Panelling

During the _____ era, architecture underwent significant changes. The buildings were characterized by their _____ and proportion. Panelling was a popular design feature in _____. This technique involved covering walls with wooden _____. These panels were often intricately _____, adding a touch of elegance. The wood used was typically _____ or mahogany, known for their durability and rich _____. Georgian homes also featured large _____, allowing natural light to enhance the beauty of the panelled rooms. The panelling often extended to _____ and fireplaces, creating a cohesive look. This era also saw the introduction of the _____ window, a design element that further emphasized symmetry. The floors in these homes were usually made of polished _____ or stone, complementing the wall panelling. Decorations were kept _____, as the focus was on the architectural elements. The Georgian style continues to influence _____ architecture, known for its timeless elegance.

color

carved

panels

Palladian

interiors

wood

Georgian

modern

doors

minimal

symmetry

windows

oak