

name: _____

class: _____

date: _____

The Glorious Revolution and James's Flight

James II was the king of England, _____, and Ireland. His reign began in 1685. Many people were unhappy with his rule. He was a _____, and this worried the largely Protestant population. They feared he would try to make the _____ Catholic again. In 1688, James had a son. This increased fears because people thought there would be a Catholic _____. Important nobles invited William of Orange to invade. William was married to James's _____, Mary. She was Protestant. When William arrived with his army, many people joined him. James's supporters quickly _____ him. Faced with this, James decided to flee. He left for France in December 1688. This event is known as James's _____. His departure marked the end of his reign. The Parliament declared the throne vacant. William and Mary became the new _____. This change was called the Glorious Revolution. It was largely _____ and led to a new era in British history. The Glorious Revolution ensured a Protestant _____. It also limited the power of the crown and increased the power of _____. James's Flight had a significant impact on the political landscape. It showed that the monarch could be overthrown if they lost the _____ of the people and Parliament. This event set the stage for modern constitutional _____ in Britain.

daughter Parliament rulers Flight deserted monarchy country bloodless Scotland support monarchy Catholic dynasty