

name: _____

class: _____

date: _____

The Role of Harp in Medieval Music

The _____ is one of the oldest musical instruments in the world. In medieval times, it was a popular instrument in Europe. The _____ harp was smaller compared to modern harps. Its strings were made of _____, which created a unique sound. Harpists played at various events like _____ and ceremonies. They were often seen as important members of the _____. In addition to entertainment, the harp was used for storytelling and _____ recitation. The design of the harp varied from _____ to region. Some had intricate _____ and decorations. Learning to play the harp was considered a noble skill. It required years of practice and _____. The harp's gentle, melodic tones were highly valued in _____ society. Its music could convey a range of emotions, from joy to _____. Harpists often improvised, adding personal flair to their performances. This instrument played a significant role in shaping the music of the _____.

court

carvings

poetry

Middle Ages

gut

sorrow

region

harp

medieval

dedication

medieval

feasts