

name: _____

class: _____

date: _____

The Role of Supporters in Heraldry

In medieval times, heraldry was more than just a _____. It represented a family's history and _____. Each heraldic design was unique, featuring colors, patterns, and sometimes animals called _____. These supporters were placed on either side of the _____, adding to its grandeur. A knight might have a lion as a _____, symbolizing courage. Another popular supporter was the _____, representing strength and vigilance. The _____ used in the shield also had specific meanings. Gold indicated generosity, while red stood for _____. The shape of the shield itself could represent different _____ or ranks. For example, a certain shape might be used exclusively by royal _____. The top of the shield, known as the _____, often featured a helmet or a crown. This was another area where supporters could be found. Some crests even included mythical _____ like dragons. The art of designing and understanding these symbols was known as _____. It was an important skill in medieval society, especially among the _____. These intricate designs weren't just for show; they were a way of identifying individuals on the _____. Today, these symbols still hold a special place in history and are studied by enthusiasts around the world.

creatures

symbol

families

bravery

shield

supporters

heraldry

colors

status

griffin

blood

nobility

crest

supporter

battlefield