

name: _____

class: _____

date: _____

Victory at Bannockburn

In the early 14th century, Scotland was engulfed in a struggle for _____ . King Edward II of England was determined to maintain his rule over Scotland. However, Robert the _____ , the Scottish king, had other plans. He wanted to secure _____ for his country. In June 1314, the Battle of Bannockburn took place near _____ . This battle was not just a fight; it was a symbol of Scotland's desire for _____ . The English army, larger and better equipped, seemed invincible. Yet, the Scottish forces, driven by their quest for _____ , were ready to stand their ground. Bruce's _____ was to use the terrain to his advantage, forcing the English into a narrow front, making their numbers less _____ . The Scots fought with unmatched _____ , knowing what was at stake. After two days of intense fighting, the Scottish _____ emerged victorious. This victory was pivotal, as it significantly weakened English control over _____ . In the years that followed, the Scots continued their fight, and the dream of a free Scotland became a _____ . The Battle of Bannockburn remains a powerful reminder of the _____ and resilience of the Scottish people in their quest for freedom.

Scotland Bruce valor Stirling liberty army reality strategy
courage independence sovereignty freedom effective