

name: _____

class: _____

date: _____

Water as Life's Essence

Water, covering over 70% of the Earth's surface, is a _____ resource for all forms of life. It exists in various forms: as _____, rivers, and lakes, and even as ice in polar ice caps and glaciers. Every living organism needs water to _____, making it a crucial part of our daily lives. Humans use water for _____, cooking, and cleaning, showcasing its importance in maintaining _____ and hygiene. Agriculture, which feeds the world, relies heavily on water for _____, highlighting its role in food production. Industries also need water for manufacturing _____, from cooling machinery to being a key ingredient in many products. The _____ of water, from evaporation to precipitation, is a natural process that cleans and distributes water across the globe. This cycle supports _____, allowing plants and animals to thrive in diverse environments. Water is not just a resource; it's a _____ for countless aquatic species, from tiny plankton to the majestic blue whale. Pollution and overuse threaten this precious _____, leading to water scarcity in many regions. Protecting water means ensuring _____ for future generations, a task that requires effort from everyone. The balance of _____ depends on water, making its conservation an essential part of preserving the _____.

- nature
- vital
- cycle
- health
- processes
- sustainability
- resource
- oceans
- drinking
- planet
- ecosystems
- survive
- irrigation
- habitat